USSR-POLAND: Signs of Dissatisfaction

[REDACTED] that Moscow doubts the measures taken so far by authorities in Poland will normalize the situation there and that new measures are necessary. On Thursday, Pravda repeated charges in the Polish press that some Polish clergymen are playing a political role in opposing martial law. [REDACTED]

Comment: [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] comments presumably reflect the thinking there following the demonstrations in Poland on 31 August. Moscow probably is concerned mainly about the lack of progress in rebuilding the party and in reducing antiregime sentiment, especially among youth. Recent criticism of the regime by the Church hierarchy and Archbishop Glemp's visit to the US next month almost certainly have intensified Soviet concern about the Church's political activities.
